Time lapse: 2:07 p.m. – 2:10 p.m.

Joseph Roos (READ, Branch Manager) discussed the structure and content of their upcoming report to the legislature on Hawaii's economic competitiveness. He presented an outline that comprised of the Hawai'i's General Economic Competitiveness and Business Climate report by DBEDT, READ, and ranked recommendations pulled from permitted interaction group reports.

Agenda Item 3: Discussion and action of task force priorities to include in final report.

Time lapse: 2:10 p.m. – 2:14 p.m. & 3:00 p.m. – 3:19 p.m.

The task force discussed how to approach the top 10 permitted interaction group (PIG) recommendations for the next meeting. Seth Colby suggested voting on the top recommendations individually after group discussion. He also proposed discussing and potentially rewording each recommendation in a Word document before voting. Patrick Sullivan emphasizes the need to focus on growing the economy, not just improving the current system. Wendy Laros suggested more information regarding the other agenda items. The group debated whether to focus solely on the top 10 or consider additional items. Lauren Zirbel suggested accepting the top 10 and dedicating the next meeting to elaborating on them. Roseann Freitas reminds the group that a key issue related to building permits was not included in the top 10 but was included in the previous meeting by taskforce members. The task force considers including building permit item along with the top 10 for further discussion and voting.

Agenda Item 4: Discussion and action of the draft Hawai'i Business Competitiveness Act proposal by Seth Colby, Ph.D.

Time lapse: 2:15 p.m. – 3:00 p.m.

Seth then presented a draft "Hawaii Business Competitive Act" proposing to improve Hawaii's business rankings over 10 years, aiming to move from 50th to 10th place. He suggested creating a small business competitiveness office to track progress and report to the legislature with recommendations. The office would consult with various stakeholders and submit annual progress reports. Seth explained his choice of the CNBC America's Top Business Ranking as the metric, citing its comprehensiveness and lack of ideological bias. He explained that based on CNBC's business ranking methodology, there are 128 metrics across 5 key areas.

Members discussed this goal, with Alec Sou suggesting a more modest target, while Patrick discussed maintaining high aspirations to drive change and innovation. Constancio Paranal acknowledged the boldness of the vision and its intent to support local businesses and create a more resilient environment for communities.

The group also discussed challenges in improving Hawaii's business rankings, with Constancio expressing concerns about chasing a moving target and factors beyond state control. Seth responded that while some metrics are difficult to change, many are actionable, emphasizing that improving rankings is achievable with political will. Patrick added that current conditions are driving young people away, and the state needs to adapt to changing global trends to create opportunities. The discussion highlighted the need for support from political leaders and other agencies to effectively implement changes and improve Hawaii's business environment.

Wendy Laros expressed concern about the perspective of small business owners in the revitalization efforts. She emphasized that many small business owners are risk-averse and focused on day-to-day operations and employee care. DBEDT director James Tokioka acknowledged these concerns and explained that the proposed initiatives aim to improve Hawaii's business reputation without necessarily creating new bureaucratic departments. Tessa Gomes shared her experience of how government support during the pandemic has improved confidence in state and city efforts to help small businesses. The group agreed on the need for serious, measurable goals and realistic timelines for any new initiatives.

The group further discussed Seth's proposal to use CNBC's business competitiveness rankings as a metric for economic improvement in Hawaii. Alec asked about correlating ranking improvements to economic growth, which Seth suggested as a potential research project. Amy Asselbaye expressed hesitation about adopting the CNBC rankings without fully understanding the 128 metrics involved, suggesting instead reviewing and selecting relevant metrics that align with the task force's priorities. Patrick supported moving forward with the proposal, viewing it as a starting point for progress. Dennis Ling called for a motion to accept Seth Colby's proposal titled "Business Competitive Act." Patrick Sullivan put forth a motion to accept Seth Colby's proposal titled a Business Competitive Act as a draft with the details to be worked out later. Wendy Laros seconded the motion, and the motion passed with all members voting in favor.
